

PLAN COMPARISON CHART

A comparison of HSA, HRA and FSAs

Healthcare accounts are not all created equal. To help you understand the differences between HSAs, HRAs and FSAs take a look at the comparison chart below.

	HSA Health Savings Account (HSA)	HRA Health Reimbursement Arrangement (HRA)	FSA Flexible Spending Account (FSA)
Definition	An HSA is a tax-advantaged savings account that is used in combination with a high deductible health plan (HDHP). Consumers use the HSA funds to cover qualified medical expenses.	An HRA is an employer-funded plan that may be used to reimburse employees for qualified medical expenses.	An employer-established, tax-advantaged account funded by the employee and/or the employer to pay for qualified medical expenses with pre-tax dollars.

<sup>1</sup> IRS-imposed HSA limits for 2015: The 2015 annual HSA contribution limit for individuals with self-only HDHP coverage is $3,350 (a $50 increase from 2014), and the limit for individuals with family HDHP coverage is $6,650 (a $100 increase from 2014). Annual catch-up contributions for those 55 and over: $1,000.

<sup>3</sup> In 2015, employee contributions for an FSA cannot exceed $2,500 per IRS Rules. Employer contributions are not subject to limits, but may not discriminate in favor of highly compensated individuals. If employer contributions exceed $500, additional compliance obligations apply.

<sup>4</sup> HSA, HRA and FSA debit cards are automatically restricted for use with medical service providers and for items purchased at retail that are identified as qualified medical expenses based on electronic inventory control codes.

What is the tax treatment for employer contributions?	Employer contributions may qualify as a deductible business expense and are exempt from FICA and other employment taxes.	Employer contributions may qualify as a deductible business expense and are exempt from FICA and other employment taxes.	Employer contributions may qualify as a deductible business expense and are exempt from FICA and other employment taxes.
What is the tax treatment for employee contributions?	Employee contributions may be made through a cafeteria plan and are tax free. If made outside of a cafeteria plan, they are treated as an “above the line” deduction.	Employees are not permitted to contribute to an HRA.	Employee contributions to an FSA are made on a pre-tax basis, and therefore reduce annual taxable income.
What expenses qualify for distribution?	Medical expenses under § 213 (d) of the Internal Revenue Code (over the counter drugs are not an eligible medical expense unless prescribed by a health care provider). HSAs may not be used to pay insurance premiums except for (1) COBRA, (2) qualified long-term care insurance (3) health care coverage while the individual is receiving unemployment compensation; and (4) premiums for Medicare Part A or B, Medicare HMO, and (5) after age 65, the employee’s share of employer-sponsored retiree health care	Employers configure the account to reimburse all or a subset of any otherwise unreimbursed expenses that are qualified under §213(d) of IRC (over the counter drugs are not an eligible medical expense unless prescribed by a health care provider). This can include health insurance premiums (other than premiums that are paid through an employer’s cafeteria plan) and long-term care insurance premiums. However, long-term care services are not reimbursable.
